Urban Soils Rattan Lal, B. A. Stewart, 2017-10-18 Globally 30% of the world population lived in urban areas in 1950 54% in 2016 and 66% projected by 2050 The most urbanized regions include North America Latin America and Europe Urban encroachment depletes soil carbon and the aboveground biomass carbon pools enhancing the flux of carbon from soil and vegetation into the atmosphere Thus urbanization has exacerbated ecological and environmental problems Urban soils are composed of geological material that has been drastically disturbed by anthropogenic activities and compromised their role in the production of food aesthetics of residential areas and pollutant dynamics Properties of urban soils are normally not favorable to plant growth the soils are contaminated by heavy metals and are compacted and sealed Therefore the quality of urban soils must be restored to make use of this valuable resource for delivery of essential ecosystem services e g food water and air quality carbon sequestration temperature moderation biodiversity Part of the Advances in Soil Sciences Series Urban Soils explains properties of urban soils assesses the effects of urbanization on the cycling of carbon nitrogen and water and the impacts of management of urban soils soil restoration urban agriculture and food security evaluates ecosystem services provisioned by urban soils and describes synthetic and artificial soils

Growth and Ecosystem Services of Urban Trees Thomas Rötzer, 2019-10-23 Numerous studies indicate an accelerated growth of forest trees induced by ongoing climate change Similar trends were recently found for urban trees in major cities worldwide Studies frequently report about substantial effects of climate change and the urban heat island effect UHI on plant growth The combined effects of increasing temperatures changing precipitation patterns and extended growing season lengths in addition to increasing nitrogen deposition and higher CO₂ concentrations can increase but also reduce plant growth Closely related to this the multiple functions and services provided by urban trees may be modified Urban trees generate numerous ecosystem services including carbon storage mitigation of the heat island effect reduction of rainwater runoff pollutant filtering recreation effects shading and cooling The quantity of the ecosystem services is often closely associated with the species structure age and size of the tree as well as with a tree's vitality Therefore greening cities and particularly planting trees seems to be an effective option to mitigate climate change and the UHI The focus of this Special Issue is to underline the importance of trees as part of the urban green areas for major cities in all climate zones Empirical as well as modeling studies of urban tree growth and their services and disservices in cities worldwide are included Articles about the dynamics structures and functions of urban trees as well as the influence of climate and climate change on urban tree growth urban species composition carbon storage and biodiversity are also discussed

Plant Competition in a Changing World Judy Simon, Susanne Schmidt, 2017-06-22 Competitiveness describes a key ability important for plants to grow and survive abiotic and biotic stresses Under optimal but particularly under non optimal conditions plants compete for resources including nutrients light water space pollinators and other Competition occurs above and belowground In resource poor habitats competition is generally considered to be more pronounced than in resource rich habitats Although competition occurs between different players within an ecosystem such as between plants and soil microorganisms our topic focusses on plant plant interactions and includes inter specific competition between different species of similar and different life forms and intra specific competition Strategies for securing resources via spatial or temporal separation and different resource needs generally reduce competition Increasingly important is the effect of invasive plants and subsequent decline in biodiversity and ecosystem function Current knowledge and future climate predictions suggest that in some situations competition will be intensified with occurrence of increased abiotic e.g. water and nutrient limitations and biotic stresses e.g. mass outbreak of insects but competition might also decrease in situations where plant productivity and survival declines e.g. habitats with degraded soils. Changing interactions, climate change and biological invasions place new challenges on ecosystems. Understanding processes and mechanisms that underlie the interactions between plants and environmental factors will aid predictions and intervention. There is much need to develop strategies to secure ecosystem services via primary productivity and to prevent the continued loss of biodiversity. This Research Topic provides an up-to-date account of knowledge on plant-plant interactions with a focus on identifying the mechanisms underpinning competitive ability. The Research Topic aims to showcase knowledge that links ecological relevance with physiological processes to better understanding plant and ecosystem function.

Carbon Sequestration in Urban Ecosystems Rattan Lal, Bruce Augustin, 2011-12-09 Urbanization drastically alters the ecosystems structure and functions, disrupts cycling of C and other elements along with water. It alters the energy balance and influences climate at local, regional and global scales. In 2008, urban population exceeded the rural population. In 2050, 70% of the world population will live in urban centers. The number of megacities (10 million inhabitants) increased from three in 1975 to 19 in 2007 and is projected to be 27 in 2025. Rapid urbanization is altering the ecosystem C budget. Yet urban ecosystems have a large C sink capacity in soils and biota. Judicious planning and effective management can enhance C pool in urban ecosystems and offset some of the anthropogenic emissions. Principal components with regards to C sequestration include home lawns and turfs, urban forests, green roofs, park and recreational sports facilities, and urban agriculture.
